Danica Patrick Gets New Teammate for Debut

Andy Hall

ALMS

6-24-2003

Danica Patrick will have a new co-driver for her debut in the American Le Mans Series in this weekend's Chevy Grand Prix of Atlanta.

The 21-year-old rising American racing star was slated to co-drive with Anthony Davidson of England for the Prodrive Ferrari team at Road Atlanta. However, due to his commitments as a Formula One testing driver, Davidson could not compete in all of the eight remaining races on the ALMS schedule and has therefore backed out of driving for Prodrive in America.

Taking his place in the #80 Ferrari 550 Maranello will be Jerome Policand of France, a longtime veteran of European road racing. Policand drove a Prodrive-prepared Ferrari for the Luke Alphard Aventures team in the recent 24 Hours of Le Mans.

Policand has one career start in ALMS competition, finishing sixth overall while driving a Prototype in the series event held at Germany's Nurburgring circuit in 2000.

Double-header gives Patrick chance to close.

18 June 2004

After three races of the 2004 Toyota Atlantic Championship, Team Rahal's Danica Patrick and Chris Festa each sit securely in the top ten in points, with Patrick a mere four points behind surprise championship leader Ronnie Bremer.

When all is said and done with the 2004 season, this upcoming weekend at Portland could be a critical juncture in the championship, as it features two Atlantic races for the sixth time since 1991, but only the first since Homestead in 2000.

The Argent Mortgage-backed event offers an opportunity to the teams which are fast and have their set-up perfected to post major points, or for the teams that miss the mark an opportunity to dig themselves into quite a hole.

"At the end of the season, every race pays the same amount of points as the others, so no one race is more important than the others," said Argent-backed driver Patrick. "However, this weekend will mean more because we have two races. You don't want to get all turned around if you have a bad first race, but there is no question a poor first race will increase the pressure of the second outing. I am just approaching the weekend as if there is one Saturday race. Only after we run on Saturday will we shift our attention to Sunday."

"It is a long season, but this is an extremely competitive series. The top-five in points are within 12 points of each other. If you can have a strong weekend and post a pair of podium results, you might get a little space between yourself and some of the others in the championship. We have been running really strong in the Argent car and, based on the test we had at Portland in April, we know we will be one of the fastest car's this weekend. The key is to capitalize on the opportunity and score as many points as possible."

Patrick has posted five straight top-five results entering this weekend's double header, but 18-year-old rookie team-mate Festa has yet to run that many events in total as he enters the weekend tenth in the championship, four points behind ninth-placed Alex Figge.

"We tested at Portland after Long Beach and we were pretty quick, so I am feeling pretty optimistic heading into the weekend," the youngster said. "It will be good to get back onto a road course after the weekend in Milwaukee and, with two races, it will be an important weekend. You want to avoid mistakes because, if you damage the car early in the weekend, then you can really hamper yourself over the next couple of days."
